MAN AS A STUDY.—"The proper study of mankind," it is said, "is man"; and it has been said with even greater truth, that there is no greater mystery to man than man himself. In looking over our exchanges we come across some curious figures, showing what any one attaining the age of fifty years has accomplished. According to a French statistician, the average man has at that age, slept 6,000 days, worked 6,500, walked 800 days, amused himself 4,000 days, spent 1,500 in eating, and been sick 500 days. He has eaten 17,000 pounds of bread, 10,000 pounds of meat, 4,000 pounds of vegetables, fish, etc., and drunk 7,000 gallons of liquids. There are 18,250 days in a half-century, and from the above statement it would seem that a man spent one third of the time.

In his animal character, man is the most destructive of all creatures, and while apparently satisfied with himself, to all subordinate creation he must appear a terrible and repulsive monster. Even in the reptile he must excite a more instinctive dread, and become more hideous than the reptile is to him. To gratify his appetites and the pride of the flesh, he spares nothing that possesses life guarded by a strength inferior to his own. All animal and vegetable nature, as it were, passes through his capacious and insatiate maw, and in his wonderful and peculiar economy might be detected, if science only owned the analytical tests, the essential principles pervading all pre-existent form of vitality. It has been said, in this connection, that man is the only animal that consciously values the gratification of his sensual appetites, more than it does its own self-preservation. Nine men out of ten deliberately pursue a course of living that they know tends to shorten their days, and yet the fear of death is their most dreaded thought. The study of mankind may be eminently proper, but it must invariably prove a most perplexing, if not unprofitable one. Man is, among mysteries, the most mysterious.

THE YEAR'S PRODUCT.—It is officially reported that the value of the farm products of the United States during the past year—excepting the live stock—amounts to $2,445,000,000. This represents the year's gross receipts, and it looks immense enough. But great deductions are to be made from it, before we can approximate to the clear profits of the year. The living expenses of our 40,000,000 of people, for instance, are first to be taken out; then all the taxes, and the debts falling due and the interest at least on the others must be subtracted. We should find on examination, therefore, that the real profit on last year's production is not so great after all. We see that David A. Wells, in a recent lecture, estimates that if the whole accumulation of the country was equally divided each individual would receive but $175. This shows how closely the world lives, from hand to mouth. A year's cessation from work would bring the greater part of mankind to starvation, even if they were as well off on the average as the people of the United States—which they are very far from being. Mr. Wells also estimates that the permanent accumulations of the English nation for the last 800 years amount to about $30,000,000,000; those for the United States for the last 250 years amount to about $25,000,000,000.

WHAT WAS FOUND IN A TRUNK.—A few days ago two gentlemen were desirous of each purchasing a trunk, and to effect the same went to an auction house. The sales were in progress when they arrived. A very soon several second-hand trunks were offered and their friends bid on them. One of them purchased a fine-looking article of the kind wanted, and thereupon an older and much wiser man stepped forward. The latter, however, refused to accept the purchase on the ground that the trunk was not worth the money paid for it—six bits. Having it on his hands, the gentleman resolved reluctantly to make the best of a bargain, and had it sent to his room. There he proceeded to open it, when he was surprised to find that it contained a lot of articles. Among them he found a bundle of letters, apparently showing that the trunk had once belonged to a military officer, who had been stationed at some camp in Arizona. After rummaging about for a while and regretting his foolish purchase, he found in the bottom a small bag containing several rich specimens of gold bearing quartz, some moss agates and a beautiful large amethyst. These relics of a life in a mining country he took to a jeweller, who informed him that the moss agates were unusually fine, and worth $75. The amethyst proved to be a rare specimen, and was valued at $200.—San Francisco Alta.

DOGS.—The Richmond Enquirer says:—If one dollar could be collected on each dog in the State, the aggregate amount ($300,000) would pay the cost of sending 60,000 children to the public schools for five months, or 300,000 children for one month. For every dog put out of the world under a good dog-law, ten sheep will come into the world. The death of the dog saves $10 a year, and the birth of the sheep makes $20, so there is $30 profit in each case. If 100,000 blood-sucking curs and egg-sucking flees should suffer the extreme penalty of the law, and 1,000,000 sheep should succeed them, we then shall have saved $1,000,000 in dog feed, and made $2,000,000 in annual profit on the sheep, by which our people would be $3,000,000 better off than they are now. The increase of the dogs is the aggravation of poverty; the increase of sheep is the yielding of riches. The deceased curs yielded no profit; the flocks of sheep will make no delinquent list. When the wool clip and the lamb crop put money into the farmers' pocket, when the busy barrens and rugged mountains turn out muttons finer than ever ranged the chalk-downs of England, then will poor land find bidders, and pastoral scenery gladden our weary vision.

The largest and heaviest woman in Paris died recently. Her weight was five hundred and fourteen pounds. She was named Genoit, and in 1848 appeared at a national fete as the Goddess of Liberty, at which time her figure was quite slim.

Arizona Territory does not owe a dollar, and has $3,313 in the treasury. The most of the counties in the territory, it is said, are almost free from indebtedness.
